Marriages and divorces

1999 and 2000

Co-operation between Statistics South Africa (Stats SA), the citizens of the the private country, sector government institutions is essential for a successful statistical system. Without continued co-operation and goodwill, the timely release of relevant and reliable official statistics will not be possible.

Stats SA publishes approximately three hundred different releases each year. It is not economically viable to produce them in more than one of South Africa's eleven official languages. Since the releases are used extensively, not only locally, but also by international economic and social-scientific communities, Stats SA releases are published in English only.

1. Introduction

1.1 Sources of data

This release covers marriage and divorce statistics for 1999 and 2000

Marriages: Statistics SA receives electronic data on marriages from the Department of Home Affairs. Data are obtained by marriage officers from the marriage certificates submitted to the Department of Home Affairs. Most often magistrates, justices of peace, commissioners and ministers of religion serve as marriage officers, although other public service employees may also be designated to serve in such capacities. Marriages solemnised in courts are classed under civil marriages and are recorded by the Department of Home Affairs within three days of solemnisation of any marriage. However, as of the 1 June 1996 no magistrate or designated persons from the Department of Justice solemnised marriages. The solemnisation of marriages had to be conducted by the Department of Home Affairs. Data capture of the marriage details is subsequently carried out at the Department of Home Affairs. Details of the bride and bridegroom are recorded together with the religious denomination of the officiating minister. At the coding of data stage, codes are assigned only to the religious denominations with significant numbers of marriages.

Previous legislation on the registration of marriages and divorces in South Africa led to customary and certain religious marriages and divorces being excluded from the civil registration system. However, with the passing of the Recognition of Customary Marriages Act 120 of 1998, a provision was made for the civil registration system to recognise, and record those marriages solemnised under customary rites. This Act came into effect as of the 15 November 2000. Therefore, data contained in this release refers to civil and religious marriages only. Furthermore, in order to align past legislation with the new constitution, the South African Law Commission (SALC) has undertaken an investigation with a view to recognising Islamic marriages (discussed in SALC document Issue Paper 15, Project 59).

Divorces: Statistics SA receives divorce forms from 12 Supreme Courts in the country. Manual data capture and editing are then carried out at Statistics SA. In addition to other relevant information, the divorce form collects information on how the marriage had been solemnised. Prior to the 1998 passing of the Recognition of Customary Marriages Act 120 of 1998 the divorce form only recognised "religious" and "civil" as ways of solemnisation of the marriage. Undocumented cases of abandonment do not appear in the statistics nor does divorces that have been granted by religious or traditional authorities outside the civil courts.

1.2 Explanation of key variables

The heterogeneity of the South African society makes it necessary to distinguish between global (national) effects that apply specifically to certain population subgroups. For this reason, the divorce data is disaggregated into different relevant variables such as province, duration of marriage, marital status at time of marriage, occupation of spouse at time of divorce, population group, number of minor children etc.

Of all the above variables, the relevance of population group is persistently questioned. The Department of Home Affairs does not collect information on this variable in the marriage statistics or in its other statistics (as at 1997). The divorce form however, still collects information on this variable for the purposes of informing policy. As reporting on Africans is relatively poor, it is necessary to keep the population variable in order to monitor the progress made in improving coverage.

There is, however, a section of the population that chooses not to be placed in any population group by not filling in the question on population group. Previously, imputation was applied to cases where population groups were omitted. This entailed using the names reported and other available characteristics to decipher the likely population group. This practice has been discontinued since the 1995 marriages and divorces report. The release carries in its summary marriages between people of different population groups and marriages where the population group is not specified, respectively categorised as mixed and unspecified.

1.3 Key terms and concepts

Key terms and concepts used in this release are as follows:

Modified Divorce Rate: The modified divorce rate is calculated as:

$$d_{mar} = \frac{D}{P_f}$$

Where:

 d_{max} = Divorce rate for married couples in a given year

D = Number of divorces in a given year

 P_f = Number of married persons who are female

The modified crude divorce rate is used to denote the divorce rate based on the number of married couples. In intercensal years it is difficult to obtain a good estimate of the denominator. The denominator is usually obtained by either averaging the number of males and females, or by using one or the other. For the calculating of the modified crude divorce rate in this report the number of married persons who are female was used as the denominator.

Civil marriages refer to all marriages solemnised in courts either by a magistrate or designated marriage officer. However, as of the 1 June 1996 no magistrate or designated persons from the Department of Justice solemnised marriages. The Department of Home Affairs conducted the solemnisation of marriages.

Religious marriages refer to marriages that were solemnised under Christian or Jewish and Hebrew rites. It excludes customary, traditional marriages, and certain religious rites, especially that of Islamic marriages. Once these unrecognised marriages are recognised by law and recorded then the use of the category 'religious' would be representative of the way marriages are solemnised in South Africa. In cases where the religious denomination is not known or when the church description is vague, these are coded as 'unspecified'. In some of these cases only the name of the town or place where the marriages was registered is indicated.

Crude rate: A 'crude rate' has a specific and general meaning. In its specific meaning, it refers to the general rate for the total population of an area. More generally, however, it may be used to refer to the general rate for any population group in an area such as the male population, the population of a province or the urban population of a country.

Crude marriage rate is expressed as the number of marriages per 100 000 of the population.

Modified divorce rate denotes the divorce rate based on the number of married couples.

1.3.1 Symbols and abbreviations

2. Key findings

2.1 Officially recorded marriages

The overall number of officially recorded marriages in South Africa for 2000 was 143 391, this represented an increase of 2 933 from 140 458 in 1999.

The crude marriage rate for South Africa in 1999 and 2000 was 328 per 100 000 of the population (Figure 1a and 1b). For both 1999 and 2000, the Western Cape province had the highest crude marriage rate (532 and 561 per 100 000 of the population), followed by Gauteng (466 and 470 per 100 000 of the population), and Free State (463 and 415 per 100 000 of the population). The provinces with the lowest crude marriage rate in 1999 and 2000 were KwaZulu-Natal (147 per 100 000 of the population) and Northern province, now known as Limpopo (188 per 100 000 of the population).

2.1.1 Officially recorded marriages by solemnisation

A sizeable proportion of recorded marriages in 1999 and 2000 were solemnised under civil, however there were no marked differences between the two years in the percentage of civil marriages, 46% versus 50%. The number of marriages solemnised under religious ceremony increased by 3 278 from 44 479 in 1999 to 44 757 in 2000. The number of marriages whose way of solemnisation was unspecified, was slightly higher in 1999 (31 272) as compared to 2000 (23 313). Gauteng province had the highest number of marriages solemnised under civil for 1999 and 2000 (15 254, 18 499 respectively), with the Western Cape and KwaZulu-Natal provinces being more likely to have more marriages solemnised under religious ceremony than by civil (Tables 1.2 for 1999 and 2000).

2.1.2 Officially recorded marriages by age and marital status

The age at first marriage is important, as it has an influence on the timing of childbearing, the number of years exposed to childbearing (in communities where childbearing starts with the formation of marital union) and ultimately on fertility. The overall mean age of males who got married in 1999 and 2000 was 32 years, and the mean age for females was (35 and 36 years, respectively). In 1999 and 2000, the mean age at first marriage for males was slightly lower (31 and 30 years, respectively) than that of females (36 and 35 years, respectively). This possibly indicates that females tended to get married when they are older compared to males. The peak number for first marriages for both males and females was in the age-group of 25-29 years and this was applicable to both 1999 and 2000 (Figure: 3a and 3b). This situation was different for ages below the peak age-group, as more males got married than females while for ages above the peak age-group; more females got married than males.

In terms of marital status, most people who got married in 1999 and 2000 were never married, followed by those who were widowed (Table: 1.1 for 1999 and 2000). This was applicable to both males and females.

2.2 Officially recorded divorces

The number of officially recorded divorces was higher in 1999 (37 098) as compared to 2000 (34 102). Overall, the modified divorce rate (divorce rate for married couples) was slightly lower in 2000 (595 per 100 000 married couples) than in 1999

(660 per 100 000 married couples). Gauteng province recorded the highest divorce rate in 1999 (1 253 per 100 000 married couples), followed by Western Cape (1 140 per 100 000 married couples), and the Northern Cape province, (798 per 100 000 married couples). Similarly, for 2000 Gauteng province had the highest modified divorce rate at 3 015 per 100 000 married couples, followed by the Eastern Cape (2 229 per 100 000 married couples), and KwaZulu-Natal (1 138 per 100 000 married couples). Provinces with the lowest modified divorce rate in 1999 were Limpopo and Mpumalanga, and in 2000 were Limpopo and the Free State (Figures 5a and 5b).

The most frequent way of solemnisation of marriages of all registered divorces in 1999 and 2000, for whites and coloureds was through religious ceremony (Figures 6a and 6b). But for Africans and Indians/Asians, most of these marriages that resulted to divorce were solemnised under civil registration than as religious marriages. Lack of recognition of customary and traditional marriages could have led to these patterns of civil registration of marriages for Africans and Indians/Asians. As a result the couple had to have their marriage registered through the civil registration system even if they had previously contracted a customary/religious marriage.

2.2.1 Divorce by age and population groups

In 1999 and 2000 the number of divorces amongst whites was higher when compared to other population groups, this was clearly evident amongst males between 25 and 55 years of age. To a lesser extent, the same pattern was observed with divorces amongst Africans and Coloureds (Figures 7a and 7b). Divorce amongst whites is initiated earlier, when the husband's age is under 20 years, this rapidly increases with the peak age-group being between 30–34 years. For African males the peak number of divorces was in the age-group of 35 to 39 years in 1999 and 2000. Divorces among Indian/Asian males remain relatively constant through the different age groups, for 1999 and 2000.

2.2.2 Divorces by duration of marriage

In 1999 and 2000, whites were more likely to get divorced in the first four years of marriage, as compared to other population groups whose peak number of divorces occurring after 5 to 9 years of marriage (Figures 8a and 8b). However, the number of divorces amongst the Indians/Asians was constant across year categories of duration of marriage, especially in the marriages, which had less than fifteen years lifespan. Overall the number of divorces steadily declined with an increase in marriage years.

2.2.3 Divorce and minor children

The number of minor children affected by divorce decreased by -17% from 45331 in 1999 to 38833 in 2000 (Figures: 9a and 9b). The highest number of children affected by divorce was specifically amongst Whites in 1999 and 2000 (1559 and 15500 respectively), followed by Africans (9134 and 9627 respectively) and coloureds (4589 in 1999 and 5946 in 2000). Most significantly, across all population groups the number of children affected by divorce was as a result of marriages lasting 15 years old and less. For Indians/Asians, the number of minor children affected by divorce was slightly lower in 2000 (2237) than in 1999 (2805). Similarly, for coloureds, the number of children affected by divorce decreased from 5947 in 1999 to 4589 in 2000. The most frequent number of children affected by divorce in 1999 and 2000 was two per divorce grantee – this situation was observed across all population groups.
