If South Africa's provinces were independent states

Gauteng is South Africa's economic powerhouse. The province contributed just over a third to South Africa's economic output in 2016. In runner-up positions were KwaZulu-Natal and Western Cape, the second and third largest economies.

Gauteng's economy was roughly the same size as that of North Africa's Morocco, if we use nominal GDP figures as a comparison. That makes it the 7th largest economy on the continent.

KwaZulu-Natal produced a level of economic output that was similar to that of Tanzania. Western Cape has an economy that was roughly on par with that of the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

The statistics of having your day in court

Free State workers are the most likely to find themselves in a spot of legal trouble. The province had the highest number of civil summonses (issued for debt) for every 1 000 individuals in the labour force.

Western Cape came in at a close second, followed by Gauteng.

The monthly number of civil summonses has followed a declining trend over the last couple of years, according to Stats SA's Statistics of civil cases for debt. In February 2018, 46 220 civil summonses were issued for debt nationwide. In February 2013, there were 60 727.
